DENBIGH

Mr. and Mrs. P. Stein, and Messrs. C. Wienecke and H. Warlich enjoyed a very pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. Emil Warlich, and other friends at Vanburg, Sebastopol Township.

Last week Mr. E. Warlich, his son Albert, and daughter Ella, former Denbigh citizens, paid a visit to their numerous relatives, friends and former neighbors here, and were made welcome wherever they called.

Mr. Arthur Cranshaw, also a native of Denbigh, now of Wolfe Island, has arrived on a visit to his father, Mr. E. F. Cranshaw, and other relatives and former neighbors.

Mr. M. H. Reid, of Sharbot Lake, I.P.S., paid one of his official visits to the public schools in this vicinity this week.

Mr. Edward Inwood, collector of rates, is on the warpath and reports fair success.

ADOLPHUSTOWN.

The anniversary services held in the Methodist church on Sunday and Monday last were a great success. The weather on Sunday was all that might be desired, and Rev. W. B. Nonnig, of Toronto, preached to a large congregation both morning and evening. Despite the wet weather on Monday, the chicken dinner at night was well attended, over three hundred people sat down to the table laden with good things. The chair was occupied by Rev. A. J. Terrill, of Grace Church, Napanee, chairman of the Napanee district. Short addresses were given by Rev. A. H. Foster, of Trinity church, Napanee, and Rev. H. Pringle, of St. Alban's church, Adolphustown. The speaker of the evening was Dr. Young, his subject was "The Man of the Times." Music was furnished by a male quartette from Grace church, also by local talent.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hawley, of Sask., arrived on Tuesday last by motor, to spend some time with the former's mother.

James Bird has purchased the farm formerly owned by the late S. L. Peterson.

Among the recent visitors were, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lazier and Mrs. Cumming, Napanee; Miss Marie Spencer, Bath; Mr. and Mrs. Carr's, D. Price, Collins Bay, at W. J. Magee's; Miss Mary Vandyke, Conway, at Mrs. Jas. Bowlsby's; Clarence Price, Newburgh, with A. C. Davis; Miss Ella Allison, who is attending Normal School, with her parents; Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Bogart, Napanee, at R. M. Roblin's; B. A. Roblin, Belleville, at E. B. Hanson's.

Owing to the wet weather on Monday last the Ann Simmons Beatty sale was postponed one week.

A baby girl has come to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cousins and a boy to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gallagher.

An auction sale of the Peterson property was held on Saturday. Quite a crowd of buyers were present and fair prices prevailed.

We are glad to report that Miss M. Lasek, who went to the Hotel Dieu last week for an operation for appendicitis, is progressing favorably.

Mrs. C. Allison attended the W. I. Convention in session in Ottawa.

GET READY FOR THE CHASE

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR HUNTERS

The open season for hunting deer and moose in Northern Ontario is rapidly approaching. South of the French and Mattawa rivers, Nov. 5th to Nov. 20th inclusive; north and west of these rivers, Oct. 25th to Nov. 30th inclusive. North of the Transcontinental Railway line the season is open Sept. 15th to Nov. 15th inclusive.

The Canadian National Railways traverse the finest hunting territory in this country. This fact, with their special and regular train service, makes "The National Way" the premier line for the hunters. The hunting grounds are so vast there is game for everyone.

The selection of grounds is a most important matter and one which requires careful study. The territory reached by the Canadian National lines north of Parry Sound is already a favorite one, but the new country east and west of Gaprois is as yet comparatively little known to the hunter, and should, therefore, be highly attractive to the follower of the game and moose.

The Canadian National Railways are providing special train service, which reports say will meet all demands. Special trains will be operated as follows: Leave Toronto Union Station 11.15 p.m., Oct. 31st, for Capreol and intermediate points, and 11.15 p.m., Nov. 2nd, 3rd, and 4th for Key Jct. and intermediate points. The usual ample accommodation of sleeping cars, baggage cars and coaches will be provided.

The Annual Hunters' Leaflet issued by the Canadian National Railways is now ready for distribution, and may be obtained on application to any agent of the Company, or write General Passenger Department, Room 607, Royal Bank Bldg., Toronto. 46-c

A HALLOWE'EN MASQUERADE.

'Twas the dreary month of October,
Damp, musty and smoky as well;
The ground became mud "all over"
When the clouds let the chilling rain fall.

"Oh; such a beastly dull time of it"
Said Tom, to his old Aunt Jane.
Can't either of us sharpen our wit
And have some fun in spite of the rain."

"I'd like to have a Hallowe'en ball,
That this house would be too small;
But—few would come on that night."

"I've a plan that would stop you all doing harm,"
Spoke up dear old Aunt Jane;
"We'll have a masquerade down on the farm
Then we'll all be jolly again."

"We'll send a general invitation
To everyone, old or young,
We'll hire a bus from the station
So all will be able to come."

"We'll ask some willing neighbors
To help us prepare the eats,
And after each of us labours
There will be plenty of treats."

"The old farm-house is gabled,
And its many tiny nooks
Will hold weird fancies, fabled,
In old-fashioned, spooky books."

"The barn has just had new floors,
And a few more lights were put in
The roof was raised an Pa rebuilt the doors;
When fixed up 'twill not look so dim."

"We'll have some games and some dancing,
The old-fashioned fiddlers too;
Some floats with your black steeds prancing,
Will make the old stories like new."

As Hallowe'en drew near
Mystery surrounde the farm;
Many grotesque figures of fear
Were hung from the beams to charm.

The masked guests silently stole
Up the winding stair,
Lit up by many a pumpkin bowl
From each carved face an ugly glare.

Night-black witches rode on brooms,
Goblins cunningly grinned,
Black cats prowled neath yellow moons,
While loud howled the cold north wind.

The masqueraders had their fortunes told;
Some would be happy, but poor,
Others from their greed for gold,
Would be unhappy by that lure.

Apples from the rafters were plunged,
And caused much mirth when they fell,
Small pumpkins and squashes were also hung,
On rafters, for decorating as well.

A large bon-fire lit up the yard
Chestnuts and corn were roasted;
Much in demand was the pail of lard,
For marshmallows were also toasted.

A lovely supper was served at twelve,
With nuts and fruits galore,
Jokes were made by a witty elve
Then they played games some more.

The masks were taken off at last
Then the dancing began;
The fiddlers tuned up wild and fast,
While each dance ended up in a jam.

As soon as three o'clock came
The sad time for the guests,
That Hallowe'en was not so tame,
In fact, Tom said, "'Twas the best."

Many Prizes and Cash Awards—Every Active Worker in the Drive Receives a Prize or Cash Award—Many More Prizes to be Listed—Total of Fifteen Valuable Articles—Campaign Given For Many—Big Free Vote in Paper the Feature of the Drive.

Drive Officially Opens Saturday, Nov. 4th

100,000 Votes Offered for Selection of Contestants for Awards—Not Necessary to Wait For Opening Day—Start Now—Receipt Book and Full Information For Asking—Call, Phone, or Write Express Office—All Free Voting Coupons Should be Saved—Too Valuable to Allow to go to Waste—Vote For Some One.

The announcement of a great circulation drive by The Napanee Express appearing in this issue of the paper, will doubtless be read by many with keen interest on account of the many new features and the liberal awards that are to be made. This kind and class of a subscription campaign has never before been introduced in this section and the plan will no doubt prove to be very popular, not only with the ladies who will be asked to put the drive over but with all classes who are now, or will become subscribers to the paper during the drive.

Perhaps the most unique feature is the fact that every lady taking an active part in the campaign will receive an award, the awarding of the prizes to be determined by the votes that the subscribers will cast taken from their papers week in and week out. There is a Free Voting Coupon good for votes in this issue that go out to more than twenty-five hundred readers, and the coupon is good for 5,000 votes for each coupon and there is no limit to the number of coupons that can be voted for any one single contestant for the awards. There are 12,500,000 votes going out in this issue alone. There will be more next week as there will be many sample copies sent out in addition to the papers that are sent to the regular subscribers, and the vote will count for some time. There will also be votes issued on payment of subscriptions as is shown in the voting schedule published in the big announcement in this issue. The most votes win the prizes, and not the most money.

Other papers in many sections, some of the larger dailies in this and other countries, have their beauty contests, puzzle pictures, that titles are to be given for by contestants, and other popular schemes, wherein thousands of dollars are given as awards. Such campaigns are features to make the paper more interesting, etc. The Free Voting idea in the Express big circulation drive will be a feature with the subscribers, and prospective subscribers, as well as those taking part in the campaign. The papers will not be sold in bulk, and the coupons to count for votes must be clipped from the outgoing papers.

CAMDEN EAST

Several have been on the sick list with colds and la grippe.

Rev. Mr. Nickle had tea at the home of Norman Blakely recently and baptized their infant daughter.

R. W. Saul and Lorne Williams were fortunate enough to capture a fox last week.

A. Allenbrack is building a new house and doing other work.

Mr. and Mrs. James Haydon, of Kingston, and Mr. and Mrs. Allen, (Rev.) Spencer and Mrs. Crowley, were recent guests of Miss Martin.

A musical contest was held in the Methodist church on Friday evening, October 20th, the main feature of the evening being a contest in reciting. Four young girls, Jessie Saul, Edith Williams, Eleanor Yourex and Gerda Saul took part. All carried out their parts well. Eleanor Yourex received the medal in the shape of a sunpicture, and each of the others the same medal in a smaller design. The judges were Mrs. Fairbairn, Mrs. Smedley and Miss Hawley. The rest of the programme was furnished by other home talent.

Large crowds attended the anniversary services in the Methodist church, both morning and evening. The eloquent sermons given by Rev. Mr. Nisbo, Kataraqui, were greatly enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Amey, Desmond, spent Sunday at his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Amey.

Jas. Baines and mother, Wilton, had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. John Skinner and attended the anniversary services.

Mrs. T. Wilson, Newburgh, was a guest at the home of Mr. Geo. Riley for a few days.

YARKER

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Richardson spent a week's holidays with Tamworth relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Buck spent a recent Sunday at Melrose.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wright and Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Smith attended the funeral of the late George Lucas at Deseronto. The late Mr. Lucas was a resident of Yarker for some years.

Bruce Richardson has purchased a Ford car.

A number from the village have gone on the C.N.R. to build fences.

Quite a number in the village have severe colds.

The ladies of the village have organized a society for the relief of the Halleybury fire sufferers. The cause has been well responded to. They have already shipped quite a number of bales.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Vanderwoort and family, of Newburgh, spent Sunday, October 22nd, at his brother's, Claude Vanderwoort.

Fred Storms is building a new addition to his barn.

Some of the villagers have had apples in Hallowe'en for sale, supplying the public with them at $1.20 a crate.

Mrs. Waters, Tamworth, spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Bruce Richardson.

The I.O.O.F. held a social evening in their hall recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Pybus, Strathcona, spent Sunday at George Deare's.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and son, Wilton, spent Sunday at Fred Storms'.

Mrs. Ward, Wilton, spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. J. B. Sanderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lee have moved back to Sydenham.

DESERONTO.

After a couple of years of extreme suffering and pain William J. Roach passed away at his home on Richmond street on Monday evening last, shortly after six o'clock. He passed into his last sleep early in the morning being unconscious till the last breath had departed in the evening. Mr. Roach was born in Deseronto more than 71 years ago. He was the youngest child born to these thrifty pioneers. At the age of four he removed with his parents to what is now known as the Roach farm on the Deseronto road an upon the death of his father he became the owner of the farm, operated and maintained it together with his sister, Elizabeth, until about two years ago, when on account of failing health, he with his sister established their residence in Deseronto. The deceased was unmarried as was his sister, Elizabeth, who has lived with him during all his life and now mourns the loss of his sister, the late Mrs. Robert Dowling, was the first white child born in Deseronto, 74 years ago, and the deceased brother, John, who died three years ago, was the first white male child born in Deseronto. Another brother, Thomas, predeceased him some years ago and two others died in their infancy. The surviving bereaved members of the family in addition to the sister, Elizabeth, include Mrs. Orvin Foley, a sister, Lucky, Ont.; Thomas Roach, Calgary, and M. D. Roach, Washington, D. C., brothers, also a number of nephews and nieces. The funeral and high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Vincent de Paul's church on Wednesday, at 9 a.m., after which the remains were placed in the vault of the Deseronto cemetery to await burial, at which there was a large attendance.

Among the Deseronto representatives to the bridge conference with the Minister of Highways, that left on Wednesday morning for Toronto to be in attendance at the conference at 2 p.m. were J. Reeve E. C. Metcalfe, Chief of Police William Bowen, Col. W. J. Malley, C. E. Argue, Arnold Collins, A. Bogart, Robt. Miller, A. Armstrong, W. Mellow, William Gaulin, T. G. McWain and Alfred McCullough. A number of others who were on the slate to attend Toronto before were compelled to stay at home on account of being victims of severe colds which are general over the town and district at this time.

Burton Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Campbell, and who three and a half years ago left his position in the Standard Bank to accept employment with the International Harvester Co. at Hussar, Alta., is home for an extended visit. This is the first time home for Mr. Campbell since he left Deseronto.

An educational Poultry Demonstration will be held in the Armouries, Napanee, on Wednesday, November 1st, and Thursday, November 2nd. For full particulars read "The Express." Everybody welcome. Admission free. 45-tf

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

STORAGE OF VEGETABLES

(Experimental Farm Notes)

The storage of vegetables is not satisfactory in a great many cellars, because the temperature is kept too high. There is a natural desire to keep the cellar warm, of course, because this materially aids in maintaining comfortable rooms above. The warm cellar however, particularly if the floor is of cement, has a dry atmosphere, and vegetables will badly therein. On the other hand, if the cellar is warm and moist, growth and rotting are more likely to take place. The dry, warm cellar is favorable to the storage of squash, and pumpkin only and not suitable for vegetables other than these. Temperature is really the prime factor in the successful storage of vegetable crops. A temperature slightly above freezing will carry all vegetables in fresh condition for the longest period and with the minimum of loss.

It is wise to have the vegetable storage room separated from the main cellar. This room should have connections with the outside through which a free circulation of outside air may be maintained, probably an open cellar window screened with cotton would be quite satisfactory until cold weather sets in, when, of course, additional protection would be necessary. A glass window hinged on the inside is closed after the first of December whenever necessary to prevent too low a temperature, the cotton cloth, still remaining on the outside for use in warm spells. Such a plan has been followed by the writer in storing the home supply of vegetables and has given every satisfaction.

The larger the quantity of vegetables the better the ventilation required. With a large quantity it is better to have separate openings for the cool air inlet and the warm air outlet, one at a greater height than the other, thus facilitating the freer circulation of the air.

If the cellar is such that wilting of the vegetables is likely to take place because of the dryness of the air, a protection of sand or sawdust should be given them. There is little danger of wilting if a free circulation of outside air, thus keeping up the humidity, is maintained.

In the storage of larger quantities of vegetables additional attention to ventilation must be given. A large bulk of vegetables usually generates heat more quickly than it can escape. Consequently slatted ventilating shafts should be placed at regular intervals of about four feet to prevent possible high temperature and consequent rotting in the pile. Two five-inch boards for two of the sides, with eight inch pieces of laths spaced one inch apart for the other two sides, make a fine ventilating shaft for a root pile. This shaft is placed on end resting on the floor ; the warm air flows readily to it and escapes thereby. Bins four feet wide made of five or six inch boards set on one inch apart and nailed to 4x4 side of the upright studding will serve the same purpose and in addition will separate the various lots.

For onion and cabbage storage nothing seems to be as satisfactory as slat-bottomed shelves, one foot deep for onions and two feet for cabbage, placed about ten inches of onions or two rows of cabbage to a shelf.

Celery demands a cool and moderately dry atmosphere for best storage. The roots should be covered with damp sand and the whole so arranged that the sand may be watered occasionally in order to keep the plants from wilting. Four bunches together may be placed upright in a row, with sand covering the roots, and a space a foot wide left between this and the next row. This space affords a suitable path for watering. In no case should water be poured on the plants as dampness on the foliage favors the development of rot. A good circulation of air is important in order to prevent dampness on the foliage. An earth floor is much better for celery storage than a cement one ; consequently a cement floor should be covered to a great depth with earth before putting these vegetables thereon.

A small patch of parsnips should be left in the ground for spring use. These should be dug as soon as the frost is out and stored in a cool cellar with a covering of sawdust or sand.

Leeks may be stored in the same way as celery. A patch of this should be left also for spring use. It should be dug early and stored in a cool cellar in damp sand in the same manner as advised for storing celery in the fall.

A third vacancy in the House of Commons representation was brought about last week-end by the death at Halifax of Dr. Edward Blackadder, who with Hon. A. K. Maclean, represented Halifax in the present parliament. The death of D. A. Latortune the week previous made the second vacancy, the first one having been caused by the death of Hon. J. A. Stewart, who was for a short time Minister of Railways in the Meighen administration. There is a likelihood also of a fourth vacancy, one of the Quebec members having announced his intention of resigning, and it is anticipated that the necessary by-elections to fill these vacancies will be decided upon at once for the next couple of weeks or so.

Members of the present government who fought hard against the Meighen-Borden policy of allowing constituencies to go without representation for some times a whole session, are giving notice that the vacancies filled before the opening of the next session, which it is still expected, will be early in January, and the writs for the contests in the three vacant constituencies are expected to be issued shortly. It is also anticipated that there will be any change in the strength of the parties through the Quebec and Nova Scotia contests. In Halifax, where the late Hon. J. A. Stewart sat, the Liberals are planning a determined fight to switch the constituency into their column this time after many years of returning Tory members. The prospects are that Lanark this time will be the scene of one of the most spirited contests which that county has ever seen, and Lanark County Liberals are going into the fight with their sleeves rolled up with a determination to win.

Tory Whip Has Norman Blood

One often wonders where the descendants of the brave men who made England are to-day. Surely there must be numbers in Canada in whose veins flows the best blood of the mediaeval aristocracy. The pride in good lineage is justifiable—for we all owe considerable to our ancestors.

Having discovered a man who traces his descent in direct line from one of William the Conqueror's most trusted lieutenants—it is interesting to study his personality and activities and attempt to measure the possible though distant influence of a distinguished forebear.

W. A. Boys, Chief Whip of the Official Opposition in the House of Commons, and an Ancestor whose name is inscribed on the roll of honor in Battle Abbey—so there can be no gainsaying his blue blood. The particle "de" that preceded the name proves the nobility of the Norman. He must have been a man of splendid physique to participate in the Conquest, for those were the days when individual prowess frequently changed the fortunes of war. Aside from the dash and gallantry of the founder of the family, he was devoted to the service of his king and country—in other words, a public-spirited gentleman.

Everyboy knows that a chief whip receives no remuneration for the arduous duties he performs—he renders his service gratis to his party. It is Mr. Boys who keeps tab on the Conservative members of the House of Commons, and who advises his leader of their attitude on the various issues which arise. It is to Mr. Boys they must go for permission to absent themselves from the Green Chamber. When a division is pending it is the Chief Whip who is responsible for every member of his party being in his seat or paired with a member on the Government benches.

The fine physical traditions of his family have been upheld by Mr. Boys. For many years he was regarded as one of the best tennis players in the Province of Ontario. Now he plays an enviable game of golf, and he has always been an enthusiastic supporter of good, clean sport.

Three times Mayor of Barrie, Ont., he emulated the example of the famous Dick Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London.

His father, Judge Boys, settled in Barrie in the early fifties, which makes the family a pioneer one in those parts. Boys were built up a thriving law practice in partnership with the late D'Alton McCarthy, and this is the office that Chief Whip Boys succeeded to when he graduated from Osgoode Hall. This year his son finished at Osgoode and he will be inducted into the hereditary law office.

Mr. Boys is regarded as an outstanding criminal lawyer in Ontario. He has acted as prosecutor for the Kingin nine murder trials. One of the most interesting to newspaper readers was that of McBrady, the Port Arthur lawyer who acted as son. The father was fifty-five years of age and received a sentence of fourteen years, which was practically a life sentence, while the sons of holdup men have been brought to justice due to the skill of Mr. Boys, as a crown prosecutor, notable among the list was the Halleybury gang which specialized in robbery with violence.

Mr. Boys gave considerable time to public service before he entered Parliament in the spring of 1912. He served as chairman of the school board and mayor, then came the byelection of 1912 in South Simcoe and eleven men contesting the nomination. Everybody knew that whoever won the nomination would win the election, and it turned out that Mr. Boys was elected by acclamation.

The Chief Conservative Whip is a man of such prodigious energy that the one criticism he has been heard to utter of Parliament is easily understandable; he asserts that there is not sufficient work around the House of Commons to keep a private member busy. That is the reason that Mr. Boys is such an assiduous worker on the various committees, including the one on divorce.

Fifty Years on Job.

Fifty years as secretary of one Sunday school is the distinction held by Isaac Hord, for more than half a century an active and zealous worker in the Mitchell Methodist Church. During all these years he has only been absent from Sunday School eleven Sundays.

On the fiftieth anniversary of his first appointment as secretary, the officers of the Sunday School presented Mr. Hord with a beautifully illuminated address. Five of the eight superintendents who have served in the school with Mr. Hord were present and gave brief addresses.

They were John Shrimmore, of Mitchell, Ont.; S. Nethercott, who has resided in Woodstock, Ont., for the past thirty years; F. B. Holtby, of St. Thomas, Ont.; G. Sawyer, now associate superintendent; and F. A. Campbell, who has held the position for many years now.

Sixty-two years ago, Mr. Hord started to learn the dry goods business in London, Ont. Eight years later he moved to Mitchell, where he has since resided. He was married fifty-five years ago.

During his term as secretary of the Mitchell Sunday School, there have been eighteen pastors in charge of the church. Five of these are still living and several were present at the reception to Mr. Hord.

He has attended World Sunday School Conventions at St. Louis, 1893; London, Eng., 1898; Jerusalem, 1904; Washington, 1910; Zurich, 1913; and international conventions at Boston, 1896; Denver, 1902; and more recently at Toronto, Louisville and Buffalo.

He was secretary of the Perth County, Ont., Sunday School Association for twenty-two years.

PREMIERS AS PROPHETS.

Recognized Ability When Young Men Made Maiden Speeches.

How two Canadian Prime Ministers, many years apart, had the foresight to recognize the qualities for leadership displayed by two young men in their maiden speeches at Ottawa was recalled the other day by the veteran Charlottetown journalist, J. E. B. McCready, in conversation with an Ontario visitor. Mr. McCready is a storehouse of invaluable memories and information covering over half a century of political and Journalistic life, and the impress of his personality is still one of the assets of the St. John Telegraph. It is to be hoped that Mr. McCready will yet find opportunity to preserve the rich material he has in his possession.

He was, for example, at Ottawa during the early Parliamentary days of Confederation, as clerk of a House Committee and as a press representative. He recalls the first speech made by Laurier, as the youthful and practically unknown member for Drummond and Arthabaska. Several Quebec members had spoken in French in a debate that had become somewhat dreary. Sir John A. Macdonald, as the House leader, busied himself with his papers, sorting them out while holding a big pen in his teeth, and paying little attention to the eloquence of his French-Canadian fellow-members, but when the young man from Drummond-Arthabaska, rising quietly from a back seat, commenced to speak, and in English, and as the eloquent sentences followed each other, the great Conservative leader laid aside his pen, closed his desk, swung halfway round in his chair, and, with his long legs crossed, listened with ever-increasing interest to the maiden effort of a man who was one day to be his seat.

Mr. McCready recalls the effect the speech made, not only on the whole House, but on the leader whose quick ear told him that a new force had entered Parliament, a prospective leader many years hence was speaking.

As the aged journalist couples this memory with a strikingly similar one in later years, when Laurier, now in the maturity of his talents and the maximum of his power, was paying little attention to another prolonged and wearisome debate — and how many there must be of them! — working at papers, talking to a Cabinet member, or plying pencil or pen, when another young man rose in the House to make his initial speech. History repeated itself as the leader gradually centred his attention on the tall, thin man with the serious mien, and Premier in the making so it chanced. He who was the rising Liberal leader of that rapidly receding day—the new day back in 1874—Arthur Meighen, the member for Portage la Prairie, when he made his first of many speeches in the House of Commons. He ranked, according to Mr. McCready's recollection:

"At last the Conservative party has a leader in sight!"

A Canadian Poetess.

The death of Miss Marjorie Pickthall is so comparatively recent that it is early yet to expect an edition de luxe of her work suitable for inclusion in such form, but a memorial edition of "The Woodcarver's Wife" and later poems has been issued in connection with the celebration of the birthday of one of Canada's most gifted poets. Friends and admirers of Miss Pickthall held a simple but very beautiful memorial decoration service at her last resting place on the occasion of her birthday recently, and the new

Rules and Regulations

Governing "The Express" Great Circulation Drive

Ladies, married or single, are eligible to enter campaign, provided conditions set forth are complied with. Young misses, under 16 years, should secure a written consent from parents or guardians, who will agree to be responsible for collection of money, etc.

Workers may nominate themselves, or be nominated by friends. The nomination blank must be clipped from The Express, properly filled out, and sent or mailed to the office.

Name of workers who have been nominated will be published from time to time, showing the number of votes they have received to be voted in the paper.

No employee of The Express who receives a salary, or any member of employee's family will be eligible.

The prizes will be awarded for the greatest number of votes issued on vote schedules for payment of subscriptions and coupons good for votes appearing in The Express.

A coupon, good for votes, will be placed in every issue of The Express until further notice, starting with a coupon good for 5000 votes. The coupon will decline from time to time.

There will only be two ways to secure votes ; one by clipping the coupons, good for votes, from The Express, and send or mail same to the office, and the other way by securing subscriptions for which votes will be issued according to the schedule published at this time. No votes will be sold, or extra papers in bulk ; no votes can be transferred, and if votes are offered for sale by a worker same will become null and void.

Any questions or controversies that may arise are to be settled by the management of the Napanee Express.

Management of The Express reserves the right to reject any objectionable nominations.

Any subscription can be paid for in any of the periods or for any special offer and secure votes on same, name and address of subscribers to be furnished for all subscriptions on or before closing of campaign.

To qualify as an active worker and be among those who are to share in the distribution of the prizes and cash awards it will be necessary to secure one or more paid subscriptions on an average of each week of the drive, after the worker has turned in the first subscription.

When accepting nominations all workers must accept and abide by the above conditions.

HOW THE PRIZES WILL BE AWARDED

The Highest Vote secured by a Contestant residing in Napanee, Deseronto, or at any point on Rural Routes, or in the County of Lennox and Addington, will be awarded the Chevrolet Car.

The Second Highest Vote will secure the Columbia Grafonola. All the remaining prizes to be awarded according to the vote standing of the active workers, the highest vote taking the prizes according to values as listed.

All active workers in the drive who do not secure a prize will be given a dash award of ten per cent. of all monies the individual contestant may have turned in during the drive.

BIG CIRCULATION DRIVE

The campaign is put on by The Express, not as a money making venture, and not as a contest to determine the relative popularity of the young women who reside in the communities throughout the section in which the paper circulates, but purely as a feature of interest to the subscribers and the ladies who will take part in the drive, the influence of same being calculated to have others who are not subscribers at this time to become subscribers and build up a circulation for The Express that will be second to none of any paper circulating in this section.

The Express wishes it understood at the beginning of this campaign that same is not an ordinary newspaper subscription scheme, and not at all a popularity contest. It is a straight out business undertaking in which The Express sets out to attain a definite, legitimate and laudable end in a manner calculated to appeal to the best people throughout this part of the country. The campaign is under the direct supervision of the publisher of the paper who wishes it understood that every transaction of the drive will be open and above board, and the prizes will be awarded to those who are justly entitled to them.

Instead of paying salaries and expenses to numerous solicitors, there has been set apart a fund for high grade prizes, worth in the aggregate with the cash that will be paid those who do not secure a prize, several hundreds of dollars, which will be distributed to the most willing, energetic, and most successful workers.

Only valuable prizes, prizes worth working for, have been chosen, because it is intended that this campaign drive should interest the very best people in Napanee and at all points within the county of Lennox and Addington.

The campaign is not for a few but many ladies will in all probability take an active part in the drive. The patrons of The Express, who are now and have been subscribers all these years, will no doubt find it very interesting to cast their votes for a favored contestant. The selection of some one who might be interested in competing for the big awards will be taken as a favor by the management. A nomination blank appears in this issue, that will, if properly filled out, will give the nominee 100,000 votes to start with. The Free Voting Coupon can be given each week and soon a big vote will be built up and the awards are to be given for the most votes. Nominate yourself, or a friend, now, and help start the drive going.

The big drive will be made with ladies, their efforts having proven so successful in former business and other drives, and it will be in order to nominate only ladies, married or single. The male element will not be excluded however, in assisting any of the ladies who may take part, and the contestant can enlist as many of her friends as she may so desire to assist her in securing the greatest vote.

The voting system, with the schedule, is outlined in the first announcement, and there will be no change made in the schedules, assuring the fairest methods in the awarding of prizes. The Free Voting Coupon is just as essential as the votes given on payment of subscriptions. The most votes will be issued at first, the highest votes are offered in the first weeks of the drive, and same will decline on a low vote at the end of the campaign. There will be no gamble, or money spending in this drive, and no chance of last minute buying of votes, but the most successful who secures the support of friends during the drive will receive the awards.

An exceedingly high vote offer is made for the payment of the first $6.00 in subscriptions that may be secured for all who enter the drive. 500,000 extra votes is offered for $6.00, and the offer is limited to only the one-half million votes will be issued to each entrant entering the drive. The securing of the $6.00 in paid up subscriptions from those who are now subscribers, or from new subscribers will be the next thing in order after the nomination is made, besides getting every Free Voting Coupon that is laying around in the papers that go out this week. The half million extra vote is good for two weeks, and in this offer, where no one contestant can have the extra votes for more than $6, gives all a fair and equal opportunity to make the start in the race during the next two weeks after the opening day. There is no limit to securing as many of the Free Voting Coupons as it is possible to get, and those who forge ahead with these votes will have a big advantage. None of the Coupons should be let go to waste for they have too big a value.

The campaign will open officially on Saturday, November 4th, 1922, and close Saturday, January 20th, 1923.

Those who wish to get an early start in the drive do not need to wait until Saturday, but should call at The Express office, 'phone or write for blank subscription books and proceed at once to secure votes. The office will be open evenings until 8.30 for the convenience of those who do not wish to call during the day. Just think of the splendid opportunity you have for securing a Chevrolet car of your own for a portion of your time for a few short weeks.

There are many other valuable prizes.

Everyone gets something.

Get busy to-day.

DAUGHTER WAS WEAK AND NERVOUS

Mother Gave Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with Happy Results

Cobourg, Ontario.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me for my daughter. She had trouble every month which left her in a weak and nervous condition with weak back and pain in her right side. She had these troubles for three years and frequently was unable to attend school. She has become regular and feels much better since she began taking the Vegetable Compound and attends school regularly.—Mrs. Jonx Toms, Ball St., Cobourg, Ontario.

Every mother who has a daughter suffering from such symptoms should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It is prepared from roots and herbs, and can be taken in safety by young or old. It has been used nearly fifty years and many, many women owe their good health today to the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian Fruit.

What is regarded as an almost entirely new trade is now developing in Montreal port. Hundreds of packages of peaches from Niagara have already been shipped to the United Kingdom, and are being followed by many more large consignments. In addition to this there is an exceptionally strong movement in Canadian apples, two thousand barrels being shipped out in the past four weeks. Some of the prominent lines. The outgoing shipment manifests also show a big turnover in Canadian pears for the British market, and reports are currently given as to the condition of these fruit cargoes when they are unloaded and put on the British market. It is thought and hoped that the British demand for Canadian fruit may broaden out still further as a result of the phenomenal amount of surplus home grown fruit here.

Copper for Roofing.

Copper that was used on some of the most famous buildings of Europe, now centuries old, has never been replaced. The cost of laying has hitherto prevented the use of copper for roofing, but a new method that does away with the soldering now makes a copper roof little more expensive than one of slate or composition shingles. The sheets, which are eight by eighteen inches in size, are laid in much the same way as old-style shingles were laid, except that each sheet is locked in a watertight joint to its neighbors and to verge strip, eaves piece and ridge flashing.

Rev. B. M. Bridges Gives Facts in His Case

It is doubtful if there has ever been a medicine endorsed by so many ministers of the gospel as has Tanlac. Indeed, there is scarcely a faith, creed or denomination in all the land in which one, or more, of the clergymen has not publicly expressed their indebtedness to the Premier Preparation for the benefits they have derived from its use.

One of the latest to speak out in this connection is Rev. B. M. Bridges, a widely known and beloved Baptist preacher, residing at Mooresboro, N. C., whose statement follows:

"Tanlac has given me a good appetite, toned up my system and renewed my strength in such a gratifying way that I am glad to recommend it to anyone who is in a rundown condition. For ten years past I have had such a severe case of indigestion that I could not find anything to eat that agreed with me. Finally I became very nervous and could get but very little sleep or rest.

"It seems that I took nearly everything trying to get myself right, but nothing helped me until I ran across Tanlac. My nerves are so much better now that my sleep is sound and refreshing. I enjoy my meals and have also gained weight. I can say from experience that Tanlac is a splendid medicine and tonic, for it has built me up wonderfully."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Garage Burned.

About 2.30 o'clock on Friday morning fire was discovered in Mr. Blake Huyck's garage at the corner of Centre and Bridge streets. The firemen were very prompt in responding to the alarm, but the inflamable nature of the building gave the fire a good start and it was a roaring furnace in a few minutes and was totally destroyed together with the contents. Mr. Huyck lost a Ford sedan, all the tools, oil, tires, and the books. A car belonging to Mr. Blake Sine was so badly damaged as to be useless. From the garage the fire spread to the large metal-clad barn adjoining, and the frame building formerly used as kitchen and bedrooms for the help on the property was in use as an hotel. These buildings were badly damaged, and several tenants lost more or less of their goods. Mr. A. Murphy, who carries on a tire vulcanizing business, and whose workshop extended into this latter building, suffered considerable loss. The property belongs to Mr. G. H. Spencer, who had a small insurance. Mr. Huyck also carried a small insurance.

The Publisher's Responsibility.

More and more difficult every day is the choice of good reading—the kind that nourishes the young and refreshes the old. One way to avoid mistakes is to choose the books or periodical that stands for something, that is not everlastingly supplying the sensational and silly. The Youth's Companion has always been publishing only such as felt a keen responsibility to their readers, and they have held steadfast to the purpose to familiarize Companion readers with the best things in the world, and by means of original articles and stories to illustrate the truth that the practice of the old, homely virtues brings the greatest satisfactions in life. Try it for a year and see. The 52 issues of 1923 will be crowded with serial stories, short stories, editorials, poetry, facts and fun. Subscribe now and receive:

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues in 1923.
2. All the remaining issues of 1922.
3. The Companion Home Calendar for 1923. All for $2.50.

Barn Burned.

On Wednesday evening last about 9.30 o'clock, fire was discovered in the barn on the property of Mr. Elsworth Kine, at the east end of Thomas street. The barn was totally destroyed along with a couple of tons of hay belonging to Mr. Berry Creighton.

Card of Thanks.

The members of the fire brigade feelingly appreciate the kindness shown them in the early hours of Friday morning by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Exley, when they were liberally supplied with warm tea and refreshments, after the fire near their home, and take this method of publicly thanking them for their kindness. The members of the Company are also indebted to Mr. Exley for the sum of twenty dollars in appreciation of their efforts in preventing his property from becoming a prey of the flames.

SLAUGHTER SALE!

It has never been our policy to describe our merchandise and ourselves in lurid language, as some merchants do. But we have always had too much respect for the common sense of the people on whom we depend for our patronage.

This sale is the talk of the town and countryside—offers unanswerable bargain opportunities in Men's, Women's and Children's requirements as well as household wants.

Hundreds of thrifty people have taken advantage of this super-bargain sale event—its economies are outstanding.

Ten Lashes for Theft.

KITCHENER, Ont., Oct. 30.—Gregory Ladamine, of Kitchener, was sentenced to not less than six months and not more than two years in the Ontario Reformatory, with ten lashes at the end of thirty days' imprisonment, by Magistrate Weir in the police court Saturday.

He was convicted of the theft of $41 from a friend whom he was visiting with his brother, Andrew. The pair were captured in a field, after a warm chase, and the $41 was found in the same field by the police.

Andrew was fined $100, and only good character evidence, on the part of his employer, saved him a prison term also.

Kills Pals Fiance.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—Harold D. Main, of Holmein, Que., aged 28, was almost instantly killed three miles from Manotick at 1.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon when the automobile in which he was riding suddenly swerved and turned completely over. Main was thrown through the windshield, and suffered a fractured jaw and a three-inch gash behind his ear. His fiance, Miss Violet Swan, aged 20, of Prescott, who was driving at the time, was uninjured.

The automobile was making a turn, when Main, thinking that it was too close to the side of the road, reached over to take the steering wheel from Miss Swan. The car swerved to the left and turned over twice. Dr. Leach, of Prescott, and Dr. Moffatt, of Ottawa, were called, but Main died before they reached him.

Man 117 Years Old Is Dead.

SASKATOON, Sask., Oct. 30.—The death of Henry Lorenz, aged 117, at Pleasant Dale, Northern Saskatchewan, was reported here Friday night. According to family records he was born in Austria on May 8th, 1805, the year of the battle of Trafalgar. He is survived by three children, nine grandchildren and fifty-two great-grandchildren. Up to a year ago Lorenz was a heavy smoker but the increased price of the weed caused him to stop. He did the chores on his farm until a few days before his death.

DROWNED UNDER AUTO

Dr. J. J. Jacques, of Fisherville, Met Tragic Death.

Car Plunged Through Rail That Had Been Placed Across Gap Where Bridge Over Creek Was Removed —Son Was Helpless to Save His Father, Who Was Veteran of Two Wars.

SIMCOE, Ont., Oct. 30.—Dr. John J. Jacques, V.S., of Fisherville, was killed instantly at three o'clock Sunday morning, five miles east of Jarvis. Deceased had come to Simcoe to take his son, Carl, who is employed in the local branch of the Bank of Hamilton, to his home for the week-end.

Leaving Simcoe about midnight in a Ford runabout, they were proceeding over the new Provincial Highway. At the place at which the fatality occurred a wooden bridge had been removed to make way for a cement structure. Rails had been placed on either side of the opening, but it is claimed that there were no red lights.

Unaware that he was approaching a detour, and while traveling at a fair rate of speed, Dr. Jacques crashed through the west rail and catapulted over the stone abutment wall. The car turned upside down and alighted in two and a half feet of water. Dr. Jacques was pinned underneath, while his son was thrown clear of the car, escaping injury. The 43-year-old lad was unable to lift the auto and release his father, who was drowned before assistance could be secured. Neighboring farmers responded quickly when summoned and aided in removing the body from beneath the car.

Coroner S. H. Quance, of Hagersville, was notified, and ordered the body left by the roadside until 7.30 a.m., when it was conveyed to a nearby garage. There it remained until a jury had been empanelled in the afternoon, when a Simcoe undertaking firm took charge. An inquest will be opened on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock in Hagersville.

Deceased was 39 years of age, and is survived by his wife and one son. His father and mother reside here. He was a veteran of the South African and world wars, having served in the 1st Hussars during the former struggle as a captain in Mesopotamia and France.

GUN FIGHT AT STATION.

Passengers From Montreal With Liquor Resisted Arrest.

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., Oct. 30.—A gun battle took place at the G. T. R. station here Saturday morning after the departure of the 4.20 a.m. train from Montreal, between local police and two passengers who alighted from the train. The passengers were in the act of loading two suitcases into the club car containing over 200 bottles of Scotch whiskey into an awaiting auto, driven by J. E. Duquette, when Police Constable Arthur Foreman and Constable Hall unexpectedly appeared on the scene. Several revolver shots were fired, but before the officers could capture Duquette and Leslie Reynolds, the latter with a Colt's automatic in his possession. The other member of the party made safe his escape eastward along the tracks.

Messages were sent out by the police to surrounding towns and villages to be on the lookout for a suspicious character, and shortly before noon word was received from Newcastle that a stranger was seen loitering about the Grand Trunk Station. Constable Hall answered the call and soon returned with the stranger in the person of Joseph Burns, who, with the others, appeared in court in the afternoon. The three were remanded till Saturday next without pleading, bail being refused. The prisoners were conveyed to Cobourg County Jail by auto in the afternoon.

"High-Graders" Punished.

COBALT, Oct. 30.—Seven men rounded up in the recent raid on alleged "high grading" at Porcupine passed through here Sunday, three of them on their way to the reformatory to serve varying terms and the others remanded in custody until the next jury sitting at New Liskeard. An eighth man, named Lash, was discharged by the magistrate.

V. Massi, a Hollinger employe, was given six months for the theft of gold concentrates from under the stamps at the mill on that property. Two other Italians, Cicci and Cardelli, arrested in connection with the disappearance of a gold brick from the McIntyre refinery a year ago, were sent to prison for indeterminate terms not exceeding two years. Five employes of Dome Mines, including E. Berlanger, arrested at North Bay with gold ore in a club bag were charged at South Porcupine.

According to evidence, Berlanger had admitted receiving ore known to have been stolen from the mine, and Lash, Koski, the stope boss, Kiiler and Solon, fellow-workmen, were implicated. Berlanger offered to serve any sentence imposed on Koski, but the defendants, except Lash, were committed for trial.

Postal Conference.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Closer political and commercial relations with Canada are envisaged in a postal conference between the two countries, which Postmaster-General Work has arranged for with Postmaster-General Murphy, of the Dominion Government. This conference will be held the first week in December at Ottawa. Postmaster-General Work will participate in person in deliberations. Among the things included in the agenda now ready will be reciprocal exchange of postal equipment, insurance of parcel post between the United States and Canada, transit of United States mails through Canada and Canadian mails through this country; uniform post office money order for both countries.

Honor From France.

The University of Toronto announces that the first student to be awarded the French Government student scholarship, which has a value of about $1,400, is Miss Honors Cochrane, B.A., of 1826 Yonge street, Toronto, who has been chosen from the graduating class of this year. Miss Cochrane, who has specially distinguished herself among the students of modern languages, particularly in French, has spent some time in the Province of Quebec, and won this year's Quebec Bonne Entente prize. It is probable that she will spend a few years in teaching, and in this way aid in promoting that mutual understanding between France and Canada, which such scholarships are intended to effect.

The honor won by Miss Cochrane is particularly striking in view of the fact that the graduating class of this year was distinguished by exceptionally brilliant attainments in French. Several of the class were anxious to go to France to continue their studies of French literature, history and language in the universities there.

The French Government last year for the first time opened to students of the University of Toronto the much-coveted posts for English speaking teachers in the Government secondary schools there, and this year showed in a more striking way its appreciation of the work done in Freuch by students of the university through the offer of a student scholarship.

MONDAY and TUESDAY

"Remembrance"

You must see it.

Here is a picture of a million fathers of our country. It is men like them that hold the world together, says Mr. Hughes. They are earth's salvation, strong, unwearying, lovable. Come and see this great picturepiay of modern life. You will realize something then of the screen's high aim to touch life with artistry and understanding. You will know then why Rupert Hughes stands preeminent as the kindly, wise interpreter of our complex American life and the yearnings of our American heart.

Mom and pop had planted a tree when they were young. The gnarled branches, like their old hearts could still bloom a little. Their tender story is a sweet page from modern life. Rupert Hughes has probed the secret places of America's heart and has brought forth the shadows with the sunlight, the laughter with the tears.

Two Minutes' Silence.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—"The two minutes of silence" will, by the express wish of His Majesty the King, be observed throughout the British Empire on Armistice Day, November 11. The Prime Minister has received a cable to this effect from the Duke of Devonshire, Secretary of State for the Colonies. Incidentally the cable is practically the first official message to Canada by the former Governor-General by virtue of his post in the Bonar Law Cabinet. The British Government will also hold a special service of hostilities, and this procedure will be followed by the Canadian Government.

Cross of Sacrifice Unveiled.

MONTREAL, Oct. 30.—"That the lessons of the past should not lie buried in the dust of time, but should feel, but should be put into practical application by the living in the form of unity and toleration towards all who hold different views, was the appeal of Hon. George P. Graham on Sunday afternoon on the occasion of the unveiling of the Cross of Sacrifice and the dedication of the burial plots of the Imperial War Graves Commission.

The Cross of Sacrifice is erected between the Protestant and Catholic cemeteries on Mount Royal.

PARTIES ARE TANGLED

Situation in British Election Full of Uncertainty.

Die-hards Are Dissatisfied With Local Arrangements Between Conservatives and Coalition Liberals, and Bonar Law Will Have Hard Time Controlling Old Guard — Party Lines Advocated.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The general election situation as between the Lloyd Georgians and the Conservatives is growing more tangled every day.

The "counsels of perfection," whether presented by Mr. Lloyd George or by Premier Bonar Law do not seem to count where representatives of the two branches of the Coalition find themselves in conflict.

In several constituencies the chief Conservative whip has advised that the Georgian contesting the seat should not be opposed. In some cases the die-hard element has ignored this advice and put up a candidate of its own. This repudiation of the whip's authority is warmly supported by the Morning Post, chief supporter of the die-hards.

In constituencies where observance of the understanding between Coalition Liberals and Conservatives has been urged from Conservative headquarters, the die-hards are urging the people to ignore it.

It is predicted that unless the die-hard movement is checked it may split the Conservative-Georgian combination wide open. This is the confessed object of the die-hards.

Mr. Bonar Law has asserted there is no pact with Mr. Lloyd George; only an understanding by which apparently Coalition Liberal candidates are being supported in constituencies by Conservatives against independent Liberals and Labor.

Mr. Lloyd George's followers are now reckoning, not only on obtaining a substantial minority in the next Parliament, but on running the die-hards much closer than they had hoped at the outset.

It is said the die-hards are determined to force the Premier's hand in the question of co-operation with the Georgians. They are preparing to run several candidates of their own where the regular Conservative organization has endorsed one of Mr. Lloyd George's followers. If they do, they know they will in some instances sacrifice the seat to Labor or Independent Liberals, but the die-hards are out to beat the ex-Premier first.

The only way Mr. Bonar Law can check this movement is by disciplining the die-hards. This he hesitates to do, although the situation is causing no small concern to him and his friends.

The die-hards are also dissatisfied with the Premier's action in sending upon a number of ministerial appointments until after the general elections. They say this can only mean the vacancies are to be used to buy off Coalition Liberals, should they be returned in anything like formidable numbers. This, however, Mr. Bonar Law denies.

Conservative opinion generally hopes an acceptable solution to the situation may emerge from the conference of Georgians at Lord Balfour's home near Edinburgh. Lord Balfour came straight to this meeting from an interview with Mr. Bonar Law.

Mr. Lloyd George is the only leader of any party at this election who seems able to stir the imagination of the people. Former Lord Chancellor Birkenhead is a good second, because he does not mince matters in his speeches, and does not beat about the bush.

As things are going now, the Georgians are absorbing about three-fourths of the available publicity. The other parties give the impression they are merely marking time, perhaps this is the natural consequence of the dampening of their combative spirit. The size of the general election, by Mr. Bonar Law's suggestions of local arrangements between the Conservatives and Coalition Liberals.

Considerable prominence is given in the Sunday press to Sir George Younger's pronouncement denying that there is any pact from the Unionist headquarters with the Lloyd Georgian Liberals, although local associations are free not to offer opposition to Liberals, if they are satisfied that such Liberals are likely to render general support to the new Government.

Lord Beaverbrook's Sunday Express is all for the Conservatives opposing Liberals, wherever possible, as a further move in the return to straight party politics. The Independent Liberals who are opposing loyal Lloyd Georgian Liberals are urged to extend their opposition as the only way to reconsolidate the Liberal party as a national instrument.

Lloyd George has declared, continues the Express, that, if Conservatives are pitted against his candidates, he will likewise stand for office. "So much the better," exclaims the Express. "The breach between Liberalism and Conservatism would then be complete. This is the Liberal aim much as in the Conservative interest, for, so long as a Lloyd George Liberal can be returned by the backing of hundreds of Tory votes, he will never return to the Liberal fold, but will remain opposed to independent Liberalism, an obstacle to Liberal reunion and to the whole system of sound party Government."

UNCLE SAM PLAYS SAFE.

No Personal Advantage In Aiding In Near East.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 30.—George Harvey, United States Ambassador at London; Herrick, at Paris, and Child, at Rome, have been instructed by Secretary Hughes to notify the French, British and Italian Governments that the United States cannot officially participate in the Lausanne peace conference because it was not a belligerent with Turkey, but that, in view of its important interests in the Near East situation, the Washington Government will designate observers to be present during the Lausanne negotiations.

Another request that the United States actively participate with the Allied Governments in the settlement of European difficulties, this time involving the establishment of peace between Turkey and the Allies and the status of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus Straits, was received by the Washington Government. Its formal presentation by Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador; Count de Chambrun, acting for France in the absence of Ambassador Jusserand, and Charge Rossi, who appeared for Senator Ricci, the Italian Ambassador, was followed by an authoritative statement from the State Department that this Government had instructed its Ambassadors in London, Paris and Rome to inform these Governments that it could not officially participate in the Near East conference at Lausanne, Switzerland.

At the same time, it was pointed out that there were important interests in the Near East in which this Government was interested and treatment of these at the Lausanne conferees would be observed by American representatives. Regarding the decision not to be represented through appointed delegates, it was said, the United States had never been at war with Turkey and, therefore, did not believe it could appropriately take part in framing a treaty of peace with that nation in association with the Allied conferees.

FIVE BY-ELECTIONS.

Voting In Federal Ridings to Take Place December 4th.

OTTAWA, Oct. 30.—Writs were issued late Saturday afternoon for the holding of by-elections in the vacant constituencies. These are Lanark, Ont., vacated by the death of the late Hon. J. A. Lapointe, Minister of Railways and Canals; Jacques Cartier and Megantic, Que., the former made vacant by the death of the late D. A. Lafortune, and the latter by the appointment of Speaker of Lucien Cannon; sitting member, as secretary of the Canadian High Commissioner's office in London; Halifax, which becomes vacant with the death last week of Dr. Edward Blackadder; and Gloucester, N.B., vacant through the appointment of Ormsby Gore Turgeon, sitting member, to the Senate.

Nomination day in each case is November 20 and the voting on December 4.

The announcement of the dates was made by the Prime Minister Saturday evening.

Gloucester Turgeon, appointed to the Senate vacancy for New Brunswicks, succeeding the late Senator Thompson, has been prominent in Canadian politics for over twenty years. In 1896 Mr. Turgeon was an unsuccessful candidate for election, and in 1900 he first came into the House of Commons as member for Gloucester. He was re-elected in the four succeeding Federal contests by acclamation and in the last general election had a majority of 5,000.

Two of Hon. Mr. Turgeon's sons have figured very prominently in politics in Western Canada. One was Attorney-General of Saskatchewan for some years; another was a member of the Alberta Legislature. Another son is a prominent British Columbia lawyer.

Hon. Mr. Turgeon is editor and proprietor of a newspaper in Bathurst, N.B., in addition to other interests and is a popular member with those sitting on both sides of the House. He was born at Levis, Que., 74 years ago.

A Canadian Scientist.

Obelisks found in eastern countries, the sphinx and pyramids of Egypt, were part of the machinery by which ancient nations kept a reckoning of calendars, according to Moses B. Cotsworth, of Canada. They were erected, he says, for the purpose of noting the length of shadow to determine the length of seasons and times of planting. All early efforts to compute time measurements and create a method of dividing the seasons and years were connected directly with man's necessity for eating in order to live, Mr. Cotsworth says. He advocates a new calendar, with the year divided into thirteen equal months, instead of twelve unequal ones, as at present. Other changes have been made in the calendar in times past, he said. Even the Jewish Sabbath is not where it was generations ago, since the world war, he states. Russia, Japan, Siberia, China, Turkey and India have adopted the Gregorian calendar for governmental and legal purposes.

Laurence Lyon the Author.

Laurence Lyon, the well-known Canadian barrister, former member of the British House of Commons, is credited by the British Weekly with being the author of "Pomp and Power," the recently published book which discussed personages and events so frankly as to arouse considerable public interest. The British Weekly is a well-known nonconformist journal and is edited by Sir William Robertson Nicholl. It says that it seems to be generally admitted now that Mr. Lyon wrote "Pomp and Power."

Laurence Lyon was born in Toronto in 1875, being the eldest son of the late John Laurence Lyon, of Bagnole Hall, Toronto, barrister-at-law, and Lucy, daughter of the late Hon. Sir Henry Strong, Privy Councilor, and Chief Justice of Canada. His wife is a daughter of the late Sir Henri Taschereau, Chief Justice of Quebec.

Mr. Lyon, who now resides in Paris, was called to the Ontario Bar in 1898, and to the Quebec Bar in 1900. He was proprietor of the Outlook, a weekly journal, from 1917 to 1919. He was elected to the British House of Commons in 1918.

Vigor of the Eskimo.

Scientists and travelers have been at a loss to explain the vigor of the Eskimo in view of the fact that his system of eating is directly opposed to what we regard as desirable diet. The healthy condition of the Eskimo is attributed to the fact that they eat almost every part of the animal that they kill. What little they can not eat is made into tools and coverings, but the bone and skin is about all they do not consume; often the skin has a narrow escape.

The STRANGE CASE of CAVENDISH

By RANDALL PARRISH

AUTHOR OF "THE DEVIL'S OWN" "MY LADY OF THE NORTH" ETC.

COPYRIGHT BY RANDALL PARRISH

"Absolutely; indeed I think I always have."

"Always think so, please, no matter what happens. I was nearly wild until I got the note to you; I was so afraid you would leave the hotel. We must trust each other."

He stood before her, his hat in hand, a strong, robust figure, his bronzed face clearly revealed; the sunlight making manifest the gray hair showing at his temples. To Miss Donovan he seemed all man, instinct with character and purpose, a virile type of the out-of-doors.

"To the death," and his lips and eyes smiled. "I believe in you utterly."

"Thank you. Good-by."

He watched her climb the bank and emerge upon the bridge. He still stood there, bareheaded, when she turned and smiled back at him, waving her hand. Then the slender figure vanished, and he was left alone. A moment later, Westcott was striding up the trail, intent upon a plan to entrap Lacy.

They would have felt less confident in the future could they have overheard a conversation being carried on in a room of the Timmons house. It was Miss La Rue's apartment, possessing two windows, but furnished in a style so primitive as to cause that fastidious young lady to burst into laughter when she first entered and gazed about. Both her companions followed her, laden with luggage, and Beaton, sensing instantly what had thus affected her humor, dropped his bag on the floor.

"It's the best there is here," he protested. "Timmons has held it for you three days. If you feel like kicking about this room, you ought to see some of the others—mine, for instance, or the one Timmons put that other woman in."

"Oh, yes," she said, finding a seat and staring at him. "That reminds me. Did you say there was a girl here from New York? Sit down, Mr. Enright, and let's talk. How's the door, Ned?"

He opened it and glanced out into the hall, throwing the bolt as he came back.

"All right, Celeste, but I wouldn't talk quite so loud; the partitions are not very tight."

"No objections to a cigarette, I suppose," and she produced a case. "Thanks; now I feel better—certainly, light up. Well, Ned, the first thing I want to know is, who is this other New York skirt, and how did she happen to blow in here just at this time?"

Beaton completed the lighting of his cigar, flinging the match carelessly out of the window.

"Oh, she's all right," he said easily. "Just an innocent kid writer for Scribner's who's trying to make good writing about the beautiful scenery around here. Her name is Donovan. Her father's a big contractor and has money to burn."

"Did you ever hear the beat of that, Enright? Neddy is about to feather his nest. Well, go on."

"That's about all, I guess, only she ain't nothin' you need be afraid of."

"Sure not, with a watch-dog like you on guard. But if you only see, I don't like the idea of her happening in here just at this time. This is no place for an innocent child," and she looked about, her lip curling. "Lord, I should say not. Do you happen to remember any New York contractor by that name, Mr. Enright?"

The rotund lawyer, his feet elevated on the window-sill, a cigar between his lips, shook his head in emphatic dissent.

"Not lately; there was a Tim Donovan who had a pull in the subway excavation—he was a Tammany man —but he died, and was never married. What's the girl look like?"

"Rather slender, with brown hair, sorter coppery in the sun, and gray eyes that grow dark when she's interested. About twenty-three or four, I should say."

"Did you get her full name?"

"Sure; it's on the register—Stella Donovan."

Enright lowered his feet to the floor, a puzzled look on his face, his teeth clinched on his cigar.

"Hold on a bit till I think," he muttered. "That sounds mighty familiar —Stella Donovan! By the Lord, I've heard that name before somewhere; ah, I have it—she's on the New York Star. I've seen her name signed to articles in the Sunday edition. I'll bet she's the girl."

"A New York newspaperwoman; well, what do you suppose she is doing out here? after us?"

Enright had a grip on himself again and slowly relit his cigar, leaning back, and staring out the window. His mind gripped the situation coldly.

"Well, we'd best be careful," he said slowly. "Probably it's merely a coincidence, but I don't like her lying to Beaton. That don't look just right. We'll lay quiet and try the young lady out. Beaton here can give her an introduction to Miss La Rue, and the rest is easy."

* * * * * * *

Westcott's purpose in visiting the La Rosita mine was a rather vague one. His thoughts had naturally associated Bill Lacy with whatever form of devilry had brought Beaton to the neighborhood of Haskell, and he felt convinced firmly that this special brand of devilry had some direct connection with the disappearance of Frederick Cavendish. Just what the connection between these people might prove, to be was still a matter of doubt, but as Miss Donovan was seeking this information at the hotel, all that remained for him to do at present was an investigation of Lacy. The careful review of all Miss Donovan had told him only served to increase his confidence that his old partner still lived. No other conception seemed possible, or would account for the presence of Ned Beaton in Haskell, or the hurried call for Miss La Rue. Yet it was equally evident this was not caused by any miscarriage of their original plans. Apparently every detail of the crime, which meant the winning of Frederick Cavendish's fortune had been thus far successfully carried out. The money was already practically in their possession, and not the slightest suspicion had been aroused. It had been a masterpiece of criminal intelligence, so boldly carried out as to avoid danger of discovery.

Every step had been taken exactly in accord with the original outlines, except possibly that they had been forced by Cavendish's sudden determination to return West, and his will disinheriting John. These had compelled earlier action, yet no radical change in plans, as the machinery was already prepared and in position. Lacy had been with the conspirators when Frederick called in Enright to draw up the will.

Enright! Beyond doubt his were the brains dominating the affair. The whole foul thing lay before Westcott's imagination in its diabolical ingenuity —Enright's legal mind had left no loophole. He intended to play the game absolutely safe, so far, at least, as he was personally concerned.

The money was to go legally to John without the shadow of a suspicion resting upon it; and then—well, he knew how to do the rest; already he had a firm grip on a large portion. Yes, all this was reasonably clear; what remained obscure was the fate of Frederick Cavendish.

Westcott came back from his musings to this one important question. The answer puzzled him. If the man was dead why should Beaton remain at Haskell and insist on Miss La Rue's joining him? And if the man was alive and concealed somewhere in the neighborhood, what was their present object? Had they decided they were risking too much in permitting him to live? Had something occurred to make them feel it safer to have him out of the way permanently? What connection did Bill Lacy have with the gang?

Westcott rose to his feet and began following the trail up the canon. He was not serving Cavendish nor Miss Donovan by sitting there. He walked rapidly, but the sun was already down by the time he reached the mouth of his own drift.

While waiting word from the East which would enable him to develop the claim, Westcott had thought it best to discontinue work, and hide, as best he could, from others the fact that he had again discovered the lost lead of rich ore. To that end, after taking out enough for his immediate requirements in the form of nuggets gathered from a single pocket, which he had later negotiated quietly at a town down the railroad, he had blocked up the new tunnel and discontinued operations. He had fondly believed his secret secure, until Lacy's careless words had aroused suspicion that the latter might have seen his telegrams to Cavendish. His only assistant, a Mexican, who had been with him for some time, remained on guard at the bunkhouse and, so far as he knew, no serious effort had been made to explore the drift by any of Lacy's satellites. Now, as he came up the darkening gulch and crunched his way across the rock pile before the tunnel entrance, he saw the cheerful blaze of a fire in the Mexican's quarters and stopped to question him.

"Senor—you!"

"Yes, Jose," and Westcott dropped on a bench. "Anything wrong? You seem nervous."

"No, senor. I expected you not so night; there was a man there by the big tree at sunset."

"One of the La Rosita gang likely. Don't fight them, Jose. Let these poke around inside if they want to; they won't find anything but rock. Get a bite there for me?"

"Si, senor, splenty."

"All right, then; I'm hungry and have a bit of work ahead. Put it on the table here and sit down yourself, Jose."

The Mexican did as ordered, placing across at the other between each mouthful of food, as though not exactly at ease. Westcott ate heartily, without pausing to talk.

"You hear yet Senor Cavendish?" Jose asked at last.

"No." Westcott hesitated an instant, but decided not to explain further. "He must be away, I think."

"What you do if you no hear at all?"

"We'll go on with the digging ourselves, Jose. It'll pay wages until I can interest capital somewhere to come in on shares."

Westcott stared into the fireplace; then the gravity of his face relaxed into a smile.

"Things are growing interesting, Jose," he said cheerfully. "If I only knew just which way the cat was about to jump I'd be somewhat happier. There seemed to be more light than usual across the gulch as I came up—what's going on?"

"They have put on more men, senor —a night shift. Last night I went in our drift clear to the end, and put my ear to the rock. It was far away, but I hear."

"No, no, Jose; that's impossible. Why, their tunnel is over a hundred yards away; not even the sound of dynamite would penetrate that distance through solid rock. You heard your heart beat."

The Bullet Whizzed Past Westcott's Head.

"No, senor," and Jose was upon his feet gesticulating. "It was the pick—strike, strike, strike; then stop an begin, strike, strike, strike again. I hear, i know."

"Then they must be running a lateral, hoping to cut across our vein somewhere within their lines."

"And will that give them the right, senor?"

Westcott sat, his head resting on one hand, staring thoughtfully into the dying fire. Here was a threatening combination of forces.

"I am not sure, Jose," he answered slowly. "The mining law is full of quirks, although, of course, the first discoverer of a lead is entitled to follow it—it's his. The trouble here is, that instead of giving notice of discovery, I have kept it a secret, and even blocked up the tunnel. If the La Rosita gang push their drift in, and strike that same vein, they will claim original discovery, and I reckon they'd make it stick. My letters and telegrams east to Cavendish went wrong, and the man has come back here to those fellows. They know just what we've struck and how our tunnel runs; I was fool enough to describe it all to Cavendish and send him a map of the vein. Now they are driving their tunnel to get in ahead of us."

He picked up the lamp and turned. At the same instant a sudden red glare flamed in the black of the open window, accompanied by a sharp report. The bullet whizzed past Westcott's head so closely as to sear the flesh, crashed into the lamp in his hand, extinguishing it, then struck something beyond. Westcott dropped to the floor, below the radius of dim light thrown by the few embers left in the fireplace, and revolver in hand sought to distinguish the outlines of the window frame. Falling in this, he crept noiselessly across the floor, unlatched the closed door, and emerged into the open air.

Cautiously he circled the black cabin, every nerve taut for struggle, every sense alert. He found nothing to reward his search—whoever the coward had been, he had disappeared among the rocks, vanishing completely in the black night. The fellow had not even waited to learn the effect of his shot. It was not until he came back to the open door that the miner thought of his companion. What had become of Jose? Could it be that the Mexican was hit? He entered, shrinking from the task, yet resolute to learn the truth. A black, shapeless figure, scarcely discernible as a man, lay huddled beneath the table. Westcott bent over it, feeling for the heart and turning face upward. There was no visible mark of the bullet wound, but the body was limp, the face ghastly in the grotesque dance of the flames. The assassin had not wasted his shot—Jose Salvari would never see Mexico again.

Westcott straightened the body out, crossing the dead hands, and covered the face with a blanket stripped from a bunk. The brief burst of flame died down, leaving the room in semi-darkness. The miner was conscious only of a feeling of dull rage, a desire for revenge. The shot had been clearly intended for himself. The killing of Jose had been a mere accident. In all probability the murderer had crept away believing he had succeeded in his purpose. If he had lingered long enough to see anyone emerge from the hut, he would naturally imagine the survivor to be the Mexican. Good! This very confidence would tend to throw the fellow off his guard; he would have no fear of Jose.

He reached beneath the blanket and drew forth the dead Mexican's revolver, slipped the weapon into his own belt, opened the door and went out, closing it tightly behind him. Jose would lie there until morning. While the darkness lasted he had work to do. His purpose settled, there was no hesitancy in his movements. His was the code of the West; his methods those of the desert and the mountains, the code and method of a fighting man.

A dim trail, rock strewn, led to the spring, where it connected with an ore road extending down the valley to Haskell. Another trail across the spur shortened the distance to the La Rosita shafthouse. But Westcott chose to follow none of these, lest he run into some ambuscade. Slowly and silently, cautious to dislodge no rolling stone, and keeping well concealed among the rocks, he finally descended to the level of the shaft, feeling confident that his presence was not discovered.

He had no clearly defined plan, only a desire to learn exactly what was being done. The office beyond the shaft was lighted, although the faint gleam was only dimly revealed along the edge of lowered curtains concealing the interior. However, this evidence that some one was within served to attract Westcott's attention and he crept around, under the shadow of the dump, and approached the farther corner. He could perceive now two men on the hoisting platform and hear the growl of their voices, but without being able to distinguish speech. Revolver in hand, he made the round of the building to assure himself that no guard had been posted there, then chose the window farthest away from the shaft and endeavored to look in.

The heavy green curtain extended to the sill, but was slit in one corner. With his eye close to this slight opening he gained a partial glimpse of the interior. There were three men in the room, and Westcott drew a quick breath of surprise as he recognized the two faces turned from him—Bill Lacy at the desk, a pipe in his mouth, his feet elevated on a convenient chair, and Beaton, leaning back against the wall apparently half asleep with his eyes closed. The third man was facing Lacy, but concealed by the stove; it seemed to be doing the talking, and held a paper in his hand resembling a map. Suddenly he rose to his feet and bent over the edge of the desk as Westcott knew him—Enright!

Desperately determined to hear what was being said, the miner drew the heavy blade of his hunting knife beneath the fit-ting window sash, and succeeded in noiselessly lifting it a scant half inch. He heard now, the speaker's voice clearly audible through the narrow opening. "There was a dead man back East, wasn't there?"

"What difference does that make?"

"None, particularly, except to naturally increase the worth of my services. I'm not squeamish about stiffs, but I like to know what I am doing. What are you holding on to this other fellow for?"

Enright walked nervously across the room, chewing at his cigar, only to come back and face his questioner.

"Well, I suppose I might as well tell you," he said almost savagely. "You're in too deep already to wiggle out. We made rather a mess of it in New York, and only a bit of luck helped us through. We had the plans ready for three months, but nothing occurred to give us a chance. Then all at once Cavendish got his first telegram from Westcott and decided to pull out, not telling anyone where he was going. He employed me to draw the will, and told me he planned to leave the city for some time. As soon as I could I told the others over the phone and we got busy."

Lacy stared incredulous.

"And there hasn't been no killin'?"

Enright shook his head.

"Not by any of us."

"Then how about that dead man in New York—the one that was buried for Cavendish? Oh, I read about that. Beaton showed it to me in the paper."

"That's the whole trouble," Enright answered gravely. "I do not know who he was, or how he came there. All I know is, he was not Frederick Cavendish. But his being found there dead in Cavendish's apartments, and identified, puts us in an awful hole, if the rest of this affair should ever become known. Do you see? The charge would be murder, and how are we going to hold the real Cavendish alive, and not have it come out?"

"The other one—the stiff—wasn't Cavendish?"

"Certainly not; you know where Cavendish is."

"I never saw Fred Cavendish; I wouldn't know him from Adam's ox. I've got the fellow Beaton turned over to me."

"Well, he's the man; the dead one isn't."

"How do you know?"

"Because Frederick Cavendish bought and signed a round-trip ticket to Los Angeles, and boarded the midnight train. My man reported that to me, and Beaton just had time to catch the same train before it pulled out. Isn't that true, Ned?"

"Yes, it is, and I never left him."

"But," insisted Lacy stubbornly, "did you see the dead one?"

"Yes. I kept away from the inquest, but attended the funeral to get a glance at his face. It seemed too strange to be true. The fellow wasn't Cavendish; I'd swear to that, but he did look enough like him to fool anybody who had no suspicions aroused. Dammit, it's spooky, the very thought of it."

"But you saw a difference?"

"Because I looked for it; I never would have otherwise. But anyway, I was already convinced that he was not the man. I am not sure what I should have thought if I had met him alive upon the street."

Lacy appeared amused, crossing the room and expectorating into the open stove.

"You fellows make me laugh," he said grimly. "I am hardly idiot enough to be taken in by that sort of wives' tale. However, if that is your story, stick to it—but if you were to ever tell it in court, it would take a jury about five minutes to bring in their verdict. Let's get to business. You want me to help you out in a sort of accident, I presume—a fall over a cliff, or the premature discharge of blasting powder; these things are quite common out here. And to prevent any slip at this end, before you fellows get hold of the stuff, you want me to call off my working gang and let Westcott alone. Come, now, speak up."

"Yes," acknowledged Enright. "I don't care so much for Westcott, but I want things kept quiet."

Lacy whistled a few bars, his hands thrust deep into his trouser pockets. Then, after a few minutes' cogitation, he resumed:

"All right then; we'll take it as it lies. The only question unsettled, Enright, is—what is all this worth to me?"

CHAPTER VII.

Miss La Rue Pays a Call.

Some slight noise caused Westcott to straighten up, and turn partially around. He had barely time to fling up one arm in the warding off of a blow. The next instant was one of mad, desperate struggle, in which he realized only that he dare not relax his grip on the wrist of his unknown antagonist. It was a fierce, intense grapple, every muscle strained to the utmost, silent except for the stamping of feet, deadly in purpose.

Twice Westcott drove his clenched right into the shadowed face, smashing it the last time so hard the man's grip relaxed, and he went staggering back. With a leap forward, the battle fury on him, Westcott closed before the other could regain position. Again the clenched fist struck and the fellow went down in the darkness, whirling backward to the earth—and lay there, motionless.

An instant, panting, breathless, scarcely yet comprehending what had occurred, the victor stared at the door opened, and the light from the windows revealed Miss La Rue, rather tastefully attired in green silk, her blond hair fluffed artfully, and a dainty patch of black court-plaster adorning one cheek.

"Pardon me, please," the voice somewhat high-pitched, "but they told me downstairs you were from New York."

"Yes, that is my home; won't you come in?"

"Sure I will. Why I was so lonesome in this hole I simply couldn't stand it any longer. I know your name; it's Stella Donovan—well, mine is Celeste La Rue."

"A very pretty name; rather unusual. Are you French?"

The other laughed, crossing her feet carelessly, and extracting a cigarette case from a handbag.

"French? Well, I guess not. My dad's name was Capley, and I annexed this other when I went on the stage. I'm one of the Johnnies, and sounds better than Sadie Capley. You liked it yourself."

"It is better adapted to that purpose—you are an actress then?"

"Well, nobody ever said so. I can dance and sing a bit, and know how to wear clothes. Tell me, when were you in New York?"

"About a month ago."

"Well, didn't you see the Revue?"

"The last one? Certainly."

"That's where I shone—second girl on the right in the chorus, and I was in the eccentric dance with Joe Stearns; some hit—what?"

"Why, I remember now; they called you the Red Fairy—because of your ruby ring. What in the world ever brought you out here?"

Celeste laughed, a cloud of smoke curling gracefully above her blonde hair.

"Some joke, isn't it? Well, it's no engagement at the Good Luck dance hall yonder, you can bet on that. The fact is I've quit the business, and am going to take a flyer in mining?"

"Mining? That sounds like money in these days. They tell me there is no placer-mining any longer, and that it requires a fortune to develop. I wouldn't suppose a chorus girl—"

"Oh, pshaw!" and Miss La Rue leaned forward, a bright glow on each cheek. "There are more ways of making money in New York than drawing a salary. I've caught on to a few things in the last five years. It pays better to be Celeste La Rue than it ever did to be Sadie Capley. Do you get me?"

Miss Donovan nodded. Her acquaintance with New York fast life supplied all necessary details, and it was quite evident this girl had no sense of shame. Instead she was rather proud of the success she had achieved.

"I imagine you are right," she admitted pleasantly. "So you found a backer? A mining man?"

"Not on your life. None of your wild west for me. As soon as some business is straightened out here, it's back to Broadway."

"Who is it?" ventured the other cautiously. "Mr. Beaton?"

"Ned Beaton!" Miss La Rue's voice rose to a shriek. "Oh, Lord! I should say not! Why that fellow never had fifty dollars of his own at one time in his life. He's only a hi-horn sport."

"Then it is the other?"

"Sure; he's the real thing. Not much to look at, maybe, but he fairly oozes the long green. He's a lawyer."

"Oh, indeed," and Miss Donovan's eyes darkened. She was interested, now feeling herself on the verge of discovery. "From New York?"

"Sure; maybe you've heard of him? He knew you at once, as Beaton mentioned your name; he's Patrick Enright of Enright and Dougherty."

Miss Donovan's fingers gripped hard on the footboard of the bed, her teeth clinched to keep back a sudden exclamation of surprise. This was more than she had bargained for, yet the other woman, coolly watching, in spite of her apparent flippancy, observed no change in the girl's manner. Apparently the disclosure meant little.

"Enright, you say? No, I think not. He claimed to know me? That is strange. Who did he think I was?"

Miss La Rue bit her lip. She had found her match evidently, but would strike harder.

huddled figure, his arm drawn back. Then he became aware of excitement within, the sound of voices, the tramp of feet on the floor, the sudden opening of a door. A gleam of light shot out, revealing the figures of men. With one spring he was across the shapeless form on the ground, and had vanished into the darkness beyond.

Lacy was first to reach the unconscious body, stumbling over it in the black shadow, as he rushed forward, revolver in hand. He cursed, rising to his knees, and staring about in the silent darkness.

"There's a man lying here—dead, likely. Bring a light. No, the fellow is alive. Damn it, it's Moore. Here you—what happened?"

The fellow groaned, opened his eyes, and looked about dazedly.

Children Cry for Fletcher's CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no effort has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. APPLES IN ONTARIO

REMARKABLE CROP SECURED IN NORTHUMBERLAND ORCHARD.

The Experience of Brock Scripture Ought to Point the Way for Other Men Who Have Thought That This Type of Fruit Belongs Peculiarly to Other Provinces.

British Columbians are wont to dwell on the wonderful apple lands of the Okanagan, and men from the Maritime Provinces speak with equally justifiable pride of the famous Annapolis Valley. But no Ontario citizen would feel a spark of envy if he had an opportunity to visit this fall the 55-acre orchard of Brock Scripture at Brighton, in Northumberland county.

In this orchard, situated about half a mile back from the Lake Ontario shore on gently rising ground, is row after row of trees laden to an almost unbelievable extent with uniform, well colored apples. Solid walls of fruit, and, as far as a casual inspection revealed, practically free from scab and blemish, and totally free from hail injury.

"We have had no damage from hail here for years," said Mr. Scripture, who, however, took the precaution of tapping wood as he spoke. For its size the orchard, its owner claims, is the finest display of clean fruit in the province in a season that has been unusually bad for scabby, dirty apples. Since Mr. Scripture, who is handling a big output of apples in addition to the crop from his own holding, has been through every apple section in Ontario during the summer, his contention is, no doubt, well founded.

Besides being remarkable for freedom from blemish, the size of the crop alone is worthy of note. Ever since the second week in July men have been busy propping up branches so heavily weighted with fruit that unless this precaution were taken they would be torn from the trees. Six thousand cedar poles, cut from neighboring swamps, with small cross-bars wired to the top, are now in use holding up the ripening crop. And crops like this are not a matter of chance in the Scripture orchard, for this is the fourth year in succession that the trees have yielded well. This year's harvest of around 6,000 barrels will be a record, which is only natural, as the trees are just coming into their prime. Some of the Rhode Island Greenings, in a 18-year-old plantation, will run 10 barrels to the tree, and many others will average five or six.

Commenting on the uniformity and well-shaped appearance of the fruit, a visitor inquired whether the orchard had been thinned. "No," said Mr. Scripture, "I find that when an orchard is fed properly thinning, generally speaking, is not necessary." This grower does not believe in stinting the supply of fertilizer and manure. A heavy application of acid phosphate goes on the land as soon as possible in the spring, followed by an application of three and a half pounds of nitrate of soda per tree when the blossoms are pink. The commercial fertilizer is spread over an area two feet out from the trunks to two feet beyond the spread of the branches. In addition, some 600 tons of manure went into the soil, and last year, for the first time, an application of 100 tons of wood ashes, a practice that it is intended to continue. Work, not chance, is the keynote of successful orchard practice, according to Mr. Scripture's theory. Starting in as soon as the land is ready in the spring, the orchard is broken up with a disc, and right through until midsummer it is gone over about three times every two weeks with a stiff-tooth cultivator. No cover crop is sown, weed growth being depended on to serve the same purpose.

The whole plantation is thoroughly underdrained, with seven miles of tile in use. Before the tiling was completed a few years ago, there was some loss from winter injury, but since then this trouble has been stopped entirely. In the fall, Mr. Scripture puts out a mixture of arsenate of lime and oat chop in tin cans under the trees, a practice that has proved effective in getting rid of mice and other rodents that girdle the trunks. The young stock is protected with wire netting of ½ inch mesh, a form of insurance that no orchardist can afford to neglect.

Mr. Scripture includes in his equipment a power sprayer, a duster, a tractor, and a truck. Except for the dormant spray, the dust is used as much as the liquid; in fact, Mr. Scripture has a preference for the former method, considering it to be more rapid and equally efficient. Ten or fifteen years ago this orchard was as scabby as is the average Ontario plantation to-day. "It is easier to keep scab out than to get it out," said its owner. "Orchards that are cared for will produce fair crops, but those that are left to Providence will never be any good. An orchard will respond more quickly to a dollar invested in its care than any other branch of farming. Skimping will never bring any results, and a neglected orchard is not worth the land that it takes up. Growing apples," continued Mr. Scripture, "is a specialized line of work, and it cannot successfully be combined with mixed farming. There is one day to spray, and if that day is missed the work is wasted. The average farmed will be sowing his oats or doing some other work when he should be busy with the sprayer. With him the orchard is a side line, and as such it will never amount to a great deal."

The uncared-for condition and poor quality crops on the average small farm orchard to-day bear out the truth of Mr. Scripture's remarks. The day of the small orchard seems to be passing, and in its place comes the big grower, who can concentrate his time and attention on this one line of work.

MEASURING HAY.

The following simple and practical hints regarding the measuring of hay are worth study and filing:

Tons of Hay In the Mow.

To find the number of tons of hay in a mow multiply the length by the breadth and then by depth of hay. This will give the number of cubic feet. Divide by 400, the resulting number will be the answer in tons. Hay will vary in density due to the character of the grasses or clover from which it is made, the length of time it has been stored, the size and depth of the mow. Timothy and other grasses pack closer than clovers, shallow mows do not pack to the same density as do the deep mows, so judgment must be used in selecting a factor above or below 400 when estimating. Hay in the bottom of a mow 20 feet deep will be packed into half the space observed in a mow only 10 feet deep. If the mow is only 10 feet deep the factor used should be 600, if 20 feet deep 250 will be nearer correct. A fair average for all conditions is 400.

Tons of Hay In a Stack.

To find the number of tons of hay in a stack, measure the overthrow distance of the stack and multiply by the length and breadth in feet, then divide by three. The resulting number will give the number of cubic feet. If the hay has been standing two months and the stack not over 12 feet high, divide by 500, the resulting number is the answer in tons. —L. Stevenson

Hand-feeding Lambs.

Lambs that have lost their mothers or have milkless mothers can be successfully reared by using goat or cows' milk in a rubber-nippled nursing bottle. The newly-born lamb requires a small quantity of milk at very frequent intervals. Two or three teaspoonsful every hour for the first day with a gradual increase as the lamb grows older. Many make the mistake of giving a newly-born lamb all the milk it will take at two or three feeds a day. This treatment is very frequently fatal. Keeping the feeding bottle clean and sweet and using the milk from a fresh cow and feeding every hour or two until the lamb is four weeks old will generally give good results. Milk may be continued as a feed as long as the lamb will take it. Should bottle-fed lambs [illegible] the condition can be checked usually by heating the milk to the boiling point and then cooling quickly. A teaspoonful of castor oil given with the milk is also an effective remedy.—L. Stevenson.

Farm Trespassers Scored.

Mrs. Bess Wilson, editor of the Redwood, Minn., Gazette, very properly censures town people who drive through country districts and raid the farmer of his tame and wild fruit and other products. "Everything that grows on a farmer's farm belongs to that farmer," is the way the Gazette puts it. "To take even wild fruit without his permission is as much a misdemeanor as to take his corn, potatoes or chickens."

Improving the Sink.

An old wooden sink was made handier by attaching a zinc drain board. Three shallow grooves were sawed into the zinc, and it was nailed to the wooden frame with a slight incline so the water easily drained back into the sink.

BEDDING FOR STABLES

Straw, Peat Moss, Sawdust and Shavings Considered.

Straw Preferred for Many Reasons —Measuring Hay In the Mow and In the Stack — Hand-feeding Lambs—Farm Trespassers Scored.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The materials used for bedding domestic animals are generally straw from the grain fields, peat moss from the swamp, or shavings from the saw or planing mill. Straw is used to a greater extent than any other material, first because of its abundance; secondly because the stable offers a medium for transferring this by-product of the field to manure, and thereby facilitating its return to the land; thirdly because it is a good absorbent of liquids. Straws from oats, peas, rye, wheat and oats vary in value as a litter or bedding material. The hard rye and wheat straws, while durable to the wear of animals, is not as good an absorbent as the softer oat, barley and pea straws. Wheat straw not being highly valued as a feed finds its greatest use as a stable bedding. The nitrogen, potash and phosphorus contained in a ton of wheat or rye straw has a value at commercial fertilizer prices of $2.25, oat straw $2.60, and barley straw $2.10. Straws have a further value in that the organic matter content is large, and of such a nature as to be particularly valuable in soil improvement. Peat moss is valuable as an absorbent of liquids, it is also valuable for its nitrogen content. The manure from stables where peat moss is used as bedding is generally of considerably higher value than the manure from any other source. It has one objection in that it is not as clean as straw. Sawdust and shavings, while serving the purpose as a litter or bedding material, add little value to the manure. Useful as an aid in keeping the animals clean and preventing the loss of the liquid portion of the manure, sawdust or shavings serve a good purpose; but it must be remembered that the fertility value of sawdust is low. Those who have straw should use it. Those who have neither straw or peat moss should then use the sawdust or shavings.—L. Stevenson, Exc., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Amateur Tanners.

Tanneries are equipped to make all the leather the country needs and can make better leather more economically than the farmer can, but there are times when the producer of hides finds that the margin between the price paid for the raw material and the price asked for finished leather is so great that he deter-

WOULD OPEN AN OUTLET

MEANING OF REMOVAL OF THE BRITISH EMBARGO.

Cattle Men Need Not Expect That the Lifting of the Ban on Canadian Animals by Britain Will Cure All Present Ills In Industry, But It Will Be Considerable Help.

Should the live stock embargo be lifted entirely, there would seem to be every prospect for a new and successful export trade with Britain in good-class, short feeders. This is the opinion of R. S. Hamer, Chief of the Cattle Division, Live Stock Branch, Ottawa. Coming at a time when there is little reason for optimism among live stock farmers, this is hopeful news. But Mr. Hamer points out that producers in Canada must not for one moment entertain the idea that Britain will be open to receive any and all of our surplus stock. It must not be thought that the embargo removal provides the outlet for our poorly finished and poor grade stock which too often crowd local stock yards.

"There is only one class which will find favor with the British buyer," says Mr. Hamer, "and this is a good heavyweight butcher type of fine quality, dehorned, free from brands, and capable of being finished off in about three months' time." This is the type which we often refer to in Canada as finished cattle, and it is this type which is now mostly exported for slaughter at British point of entry under present embargo-restricted conditions.

It will, perhaps, come rather as a blow to many stock raisers to find British requirements drawn within such narrow limits. With the United States raising barriers against our cattle, many of our stock men looked to the lifting of the embargo as the panacea for all the ills that have gradually accumulated to strike harshest at the cattle business. Disappointment will be most keen with the western man. For many years the United States was a good market for the western, partly "unfinished steer; the buyer across the line found this class of animal just fitted to his needs. The British market has no use for such stock.

Will there be a steady market for our stock and how many head can the Old Country take from us? Is it worth while going to the trouble to form an elaborate export trade organization? To these questions the Live Stock Branch can give very effectual answers. "Present conditions all point to there being a ready market in Great Britain for the right class of Canadian cattle," even though the embargo is not yet lifted, representatives from Old Country grazier and agricultural associations are already in Canada for the purpose of forming shipping connections. Among these trade ambassadors is the representative of the great Norfolk Graziers' Association, gentlemen plan to come to some form of understanding with the Canadian farmer organizations so that shipping may be carried on practically direct between producer and British buyer and feeder. Such an arrangement is hoped to bring about proper sort of proper grading and [illegible] same time cut out the added cost of the intermediary cattle trader." This statement from Mr. Hamer will serve to show how seriously the British buyers are taking up the question of Canadian importations. It now seems to be a question of whether we can export in sufficient numbers and with efficient regularity. Indeed it was this very aspect of the case which prompted much of the hesitancy shown in Britain to the lifting of the embargo.

The fear was openly expressed that, after the first wave of enthusiasm had prompted Canada to export, the shipments would fall off and that the British cattle raisers, frightened into activity imports, might be found unwilling to keep up their old supply. It was predicted that taking down the bars to Canadian cattle would mean an early dearth of good feeders.

Does Canada raise a sufficient number of the right sort of cattle to meet the expected needs of the British market? P. E. Light, Markets Division, Live Stock Branch, thinks that the option that Canada might at the present have about 100,000 head fit for export to Great Britain, but that it was impossible to even approximately estimate the extent of possible British buyings. Many Old Country graziers had expressed the desire to buy Canadian cattle, but there were many prospects who would have to be shown the worth of our wares before business could be done. He was insistent upon the fact being generally realized that one type of cattle and only one would find favor in British markets—short-keep steers, such as are commonly called "finished" in Canadian stock yards.

Mr. Light put the matter in as clear a form as possible: "No person can definitely state the prospects for profit under the multitude of varying conditions that affect such trade as cattle export. But there is this practical certainty that the export pays under the present system of slaughter-at-the-port-of-entry, then with the new possibilities opened up by the lifting of the embargo the business should have considerably brighter prospects. Under present conditions, cattle often export even when market conditions are bad, and the exporter must either sell at ruinous prices or else hold his stuff in the limited space of the pens allowed to Canadian cattle, paying rental, and paying often for high-priced feed and help. Either way he is bound to lose. With the embargo gone, the exporter may ship direct to some inland buyers, who may be expected to pay reasonable prices, as he has the chance of selling as a rule under good market prices or in low periods holding the cattle over on grass until prices again go up."

Pure-Breds Improving.

Live stock exhibits at the big shows and smaller fall fairs go to indicate that at least the pure-breds in Ontario are improving in quality. This will show effect in improvement in the bulk of grade stock as soon as sanitating results open up new room prices are wiped out. Producers of commercial cattle became somewhat careless with regard to breeding when everything was accepted on the open market.

A good woodsman always puts out his camp fire and cleans up his camp before he leaves.

FASHION'S FANCIES FOR FALL

New Clothes Are Apt to Blaze Forth in the Bizarre Shades, Observes Fashion Writer.

Black has become the vogue. Take it as you will with its variety of trimmings, writes a fashion correspondent, the frock of black is an essential to the well-equipped wardrobe this season.

It may call a compromise by selecting gray for its trimming. But the frock must be black in foundation, regardless of its overtunics or draperies. What does this predict for fall, women are asking.

Either of two things will happen. Designers will insist upon showing their color skill and defy the disappointment of summer, so that fall clothes are very apt to blaze forth in the bizarre shades which outdoors togs demanded not so long ago. Already there are evidences of fancy coats being fashioned on such shades as light henna, flame, almond green and tangerine.

Whether women will demand the dark clothes to which they have become accustomed, or whether they will yield to the dictates of the designers, who seem to insist upon displaying their color knowledge, still remains a matter of speculation. But one fact is definitely settled. Frocks, suits and wraps will be trimmed lavishly. Not so much in evidence are the drapes and pipings and panels that bedeck the summer styles, but, rather, the pendulum seems swung backward to the era of embroidery in silk, wool and beads of every description.

Tunic blouses, lavish in crystal beadings, are important. They are so practical and may be used with so many fetching effects that it will take a goodly amount of persuasion for the majority of women to relinquish their claim.

Frocks are more in evidence than suits or cape suits. The three-piece model of summer is, no doubt, responsible for this change. Not so long ago every woman figured on selecting her fall suit, and she began to think of it when summer lulled its last breeze to sleep. Now she looks further ahead and begins to prepare her wardrobe, mentally, with one eye on what will be offered later.

COMBINE KID AND GEORGETTE

Vest Blouses Have Crepe Backs and Sleeves; Gilet Sort Made of White Satin.

Among the blouses are models combining kid and georgette crepe, the kid being used for the vest, while the georgette crepe forms the back and sleeves. Charming blouses of the gilet sort are also evolved from white satin, with the vest portion effectively embroidered in metal and black threads.

There is great diversity in the cut of new blouses. Models of the overblouse sort are in greatest demand. The general tendency is toward shorter lines. In spite of their shorter lines the waistline remains low. In many instances the overblouse ends at the waistline at the sides and the back, sloping slightly below it in the front. Other blouses are so short that they barely cover the top of the skirt.

There are models that hang perfectly straight, which may be drawn in at the waist with a string belt, while others are draped across the front after the manner of the dropped dress that wraps the figure closely.

Sweaters in Colors.

Shetland and shin wool slipons are popular sweater numbers in plain and striped effects, but always in black and white, gray and white, pastel blues or neutral colorings, sometimes repeated in stockings and hat. Bright colors are conspicuous by their absence.

JEWELRY IS FAD IN KNITTED SUITS

Craze for Necklaces, Pendants, Bracelets, Earrings.

Buyers Are Enthusiastic Regarding Bright Future They See in Store for Decorations.

The craze for new types of jewelry, particularly for necklaces, pendants, bracelets, brooches, earrings and headdresses, is steadily increasing, states a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune. Combinations of pearls, brilliants and platinum, pearls and onyx and the use of semi-precious stones, such as lapis lazuli and colored crystal in sets that are especially designed to accompany certain costumes, are having a wide vogue. Manufacturers of imitation jewelry are hastening to copy these new designs brought out by the leading jewelers and launched by the most exclusive dressmakers and their smart clientele.

Several American buyers returning from abroad expressed great enthusiasm regarding the bright future which they consider is in store for novelty jewelry, especially pieces in black and white effects, such as in combination of crystal and onyx and jet and pearls. Crystal, jet and pearls are frequently combined, especially in necklaces. The combination of these three is exceedingly pleasing, the whiteness of the crystal offsetting the blackness of the jet.

There are necklaces formed of long, twisted chains of fine pearls finished with a tassel which has as the last bead an onyx somewhat larger than the last pearl, the whole being held by an onyx slide. Others consist of a tassel of pearls having an onyx top, which is suspended on a long black silk cord. Still others have silver and marcasite tops and small pearls set between links of silver for the chain.

Plaque pendants or cabochons, which are suspended from silk cords or narrow velvet ribbons, are made from crystal or from onyx set in steel frames having a small motif of either enamel or stones. These are distinctly reminiscent of the Second Empire period. Other cabochons are of crystal set in a frame of steel and decorated with a motif of marcasite.

Those who are fond of colorful effects will take kindly to crystal cabochons in colors akin to the dull gold novelties set with colored stones. Frequently the cabochon is of colored galalith with a motif applique to it of fine metal. Again the pendant is of the metal ornamented with colored stones.

TAFFETA FOR YOUNG GIRLS

Taffeta is always charming for the young girls, and the Basque bodice, as shown here, is particularly attractive if becomingly worn upon a dainty figure. The wheels of pleated taffeta are decorative.

PETTICOATS AGAIN IN STYLE

Interest in the Garment Is Stimulated by Fact That Outer Skirt Is to Be Longer.

The increased skirt length, which is an assured fact for fall and winter, has served to stimulate interest in the petticoat. This garment, which to a large extent has been taboo in favor of bloomers during the last few seasons, seems destined to have a run of favor again.

Among the undergarment novelties recently seen, one that is distinctly practical, as well as novel, is a step-in chemise, with plaited petticoat section both back and front.

Corsets continuing to be light of weight, both as to fabric and boning, with short tops and as much elastic as possible used so that they give to and with the figure.

IN KNITTED SUITS

White and Various Tones of Yellow Are Prominent.

Bright Red Trimmings and Plaid Effects for Fall Wear Supplied by the Makers.

There is no indication of an abatement in the demand for the knitted wool suit and dress, declares a fashion writer in the New York Tribune. Consequently dressmakers are making hay while the sun shines and putting forth new models of this sort. Knitted white suits are very prominent just now. Many of them have bright red trimmings. Following closely is the wake of the white suit are those in various tones of yellow.

With the thoughts of the buying public turning toward autumn various great houses show models in plaid effects. The colorings, gray, white and black, are quite subdued in effect. The collar, the border on the coat and the belt are knitted in gray.

Suits much in vogue for the early autumn are those consisting of a jacket and skirt knitted in artificial silk in tobacco brown, frequently combined with beige and white. The suit may be in beige color, with a woven border effect of tobacco brown and white on the sleeves, around the bottom of the coat and the bottom of the skirt.

An interesting suit is knitted in brown, beige and black wool. It consists of a skirt and a short jacket. A very unusual girdle is attached to the skirt. The coat tucks inside the skirt. This suit embodies an entirely new idea in outing suits or in suits of any sort.

NO MATTER HOW HOT THE DAY

Many New York women have effectively thrown aside black and dull colors and appear in laces, chiffon—the delicacies of fashion. This gown is a combination of peach-colored refets, delicate lace and embroidery representing each flower that blooms in the garden.

WELCOME, WINTRY WINDS ?

What did you do with your summer's dough ?

It's gone ; and you hate to tell.

Soon we'll have both hail and snow,

It sure would make one yell.

But I we should worry ! let it come,

The wintry winds we'll greet,

For we were shod at the Hospital

And we shall have dry feet.

Hog ! Dog ! nor devil, do we fear,

For our understanding's good ;

Our sox are dry, our feet are glad,

We did as wise fool's should.

Services will be held in St. Mary Magdalene's Church at 2.30 and interment at Riverside.

WILL BIRDS DIE OUT?

Signs That One Day This Will Be a Birdless World.

A birdless world is not beyond the bounds of probability. Lovers of birds are compelled to admit that the number of Canadian birds is on the down-grade. Many varieties, formerly well known, are now all but extinct.

The extinction of certain birds may be traced to natural causes, such as the preying of the larger on the smaller. Unfortunately, however, it does not seem that the weaker species are going to the wall, and the stronger gaining ground.

Fewer birds to the city dwellers may mean only the reduction of the ubiquitous sparrow; but the decrease of birds in country districts is a problem of vital importance. Birds do damage to growing crops, but a birdless world might easily bring about a fruitless world.

Apart altogether from their beauty and the harmony they impart to country life, their value, from a utility point of view, cannot be overestimated.

Insect-devouring birds are an absolute necessity, and it is a regrettable fact that the greatest reduction has taken place in this class.

This shortage, as has been said, cannot be traced to a ruthless war waged against the feathered tribe. The disappearance of many beautiful varieties, it must be admitted with shame, may be traced to fashion's fickle fancies and the ravages of alleged sportsmen. But there is another force, beyond man's control, working for the destruction of nature's feathered choir.

Several nests kept under observation during this season revealed the fact that many eggs which had been subjected to the usual period of incubation failed to produce chicks.

This, of course, is not an unusual thing in wild bird life, and may often be due to the death of either parent. In the nests referred to, however, incubation seems to have been completed.

There is another theory worth considering, one more likely to account for young bird shortage, and one which, in generations to come, may turn our world into a birdless one.

Bird life, as we know it to-day, has been pretty much the same for generations, with this exception, of course—that certain birds have disappeared altogether. As there is no check in wild bird life, in so far as mating is concerned, a system of inter-breeding has been going on during these ages.

Crossing in plant life, inter-breeding spells extinction. The stock begins to show signs of reduced vitality.

Once the number of any species is reduced, unrelated selection in mating becomes a difficult problem, which, of course, cannot be solved by the birds' limited intelligence.

What will happen will be obvious to the reader. In the near future, infertile eggs will be laid, and incubation become impossible. Then the dawn of a birdless world will only be a matter of time.

Cash For the League.

Under a new scheme for the apportionment of the expenses of the League of Nations, which takes into account nations has devastations and its difficulties of certain small states, as a matter developed from Geneva, Great British's share will be 2,100,-000 gold francs; Australia's 576,000 India's 1,440,000, South Africa's 432,000, New Zealand's 221,000 and Canada's 775,000 gold francs.

Flax Seed for Japan.

A report from Yokohama states that the first shipment of Canadian flax seed to Japan reached there in good condition, and was transhipped by coast steamer to the Kaksido, where it is being sown by way of experiment by one of the largest growers of flax in Japan. If the results prove satisfactory, there will, no doubt, be further business in this product.

Municipal Golf Courses.

The spread of the golfing craze in the United States and Canada has led to public ownership of golf courses. Many cities across the border have municipal links, and in Western Canada, where large flat areas abound, nearly all communities of consequence seem to have a communal one. In Winnipeg, for instance, 60,000 players have passed over the Municipal Golf links in two years. That would be an average of about two hundred per day for six months. This year Killarney, Birtle, Portage la Prairie, Kenora, Dauphin, Minnedosa, Sandy Hook and other places in Manitoba have created or arranged for municipal links. It is only in the last two or three years that golfing has passed from the "exclusive club" stage into a great popular pastime, calling for facilities open to every citizen. The large area required for a nine or eighteen hole course prohibits any but wealthy men owning a private stand. Most of the clubs are fairly exclusive, and cost too much for the ordinary earner of a livelihood. Yet golf is so "intriguing" a game that once these people of limited means have learned a little about it—on some summer hotel course, perhaps—they demand facilities to develop their game.

Tennis has doubled in popularity also in the last two or three years, and is a strong rival of golf. The persistency of the public in following up golf is one of the healthiest symptoms of a renewed solidity of opinion, for good sports have no Bolshevism in their blood. Playgrounds and amusement centres are recognized everywhere as legitimate public enterprises and extensions to golf in municipal links will feature civic policy in the future.

Why Engines Are Feminine.

Railway officials keep a close watch upon coal consumption, as it is one of their biggest expenditure items. Before working a trip each engine is coaled and every ounce put into the bunker is weighed and debited against it. A monthly analysis is made for each division of the running shed so that different drivers can see their coal consumption per mile. Engines, like individuals, are subject to all sorts of aches and pains, stiffness at the joints and other complaints, which increase their appetite for fuel. No two engines perform the same results, although they may be identical in build. Their moods are also variable. "That's why we always refer to them in the feminine," recently remarked an engineer. An express locomotive hauling 250 tons behind the tender will consume approximately 40 pounds of coal per mile, while with a heavy freight load probably double this quantity would be thrown into the firebox.
